

IRAF Report November 2020

BASIC DESCRIPTION

After the 2016 presidential election, an unforeseen series of actions and policies by our government took place that undermined the health and safety of women and girls throughout our region, state, and country. WOMEN'S WAY rapidly responded by launching the Immediate Response Action Fund (IRAF) on June 22, 2017. This nimble and agile grantmaking program is designed to quickly address unanticipated and urgent needs of women and girls in the greater Philadelphia region.

KEYWORDS & MESSAGING

- IRAF addresses urgent and unanticipated needs of organizations or programs that primarily serve women and girls
- From receiving a completed application to communicating a decision – the IRAF grant review process is completed in 10 business days

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Rapid response funding is critical to prevent disruption of essential, life-saving services for women and children,
- Agile and rapid funding is essential to address unanticipated and sudden increases in demand of services for subpopulations of women and girls
- Economic self-sufficiency is the most frequent area of need and most funded pillar
- The most common unanticipated need is for operational expenses: capital improvements, moving expenses, temporary relocation
- Funding unexpected operational expenses helped build the sustainability of grantees by strengthening their capacity to provide ongoing services, improve quality of services, expand services, engage more volunteers, and leverage additional funding
- Of low income populations served, the highest demand for funding came from incarcerated / re-entering women

GRANTEE QUOTE

“Access to abortion care is a priority at Planned Parenthood Keystone. We are thrilled to partner with WOMEN'S WAY. Their commitment to advancing and protecting reproductive freedom and health care access make them ideal partners as we seek to reassure our patients that abortion care is still safe, legal, and accessible in Pennsylvania.”

- Melissa Reed, CEO & President of PPKeystone, which is headquartered in Bucks County.
